Update: Neal Schon says he didn't bail on Silverdocs

By The Reliable Source

Neal Schon says he didn't blow off a Silverdocs film festival audience when he left abruptly after the screening of a new Journey rockumentary Monday night. The band's lead guitarist told us Wednesday he told the filmmakers all along he wouldn't participate in a panel discussion about "Don't Stop Believin': Everyman's Journey," and doesn't know why festival organizers were informed otherwise.

(A Silverdocs rep says the band's people approved press material describing the night's expected line-up.)

Schon said he wanted to avoid any heckling or hassling of his controversial lady love, Michael Salahi — plus, he just doesn't like Q&As. "I was never comfortable sitting on stool, having people ask me questions, without a guitar in my hand," the veteran rock star said. "I have tinnitus, I can barely hear what the people are saying."

The red carpet for the annual AFI/Discovery festival rolled on Tuesday night with a bit more gravitas: Acclaimed documentarians Joe Berlinger and Bruce Sinofsky were honored at the Charles Guggenheim Symposium. They were saluted by none other than Jason Baldwin, one of the young Arkansas men known as the "West Memphis Three" released from life sentences for murder after the filmmakers's "Paradise Lost" trilogy made the case for their innocence. The film festival runs through Sunday.

They could have asked him questions with a guitar in his hand. Could it really be that he isn't that bright? Also, who give a darn about this Salahi woman? Who gives a crap about Neal Schon? That is not who the movie is about. It is about Arnel Pineda. The disappointment in the evening was not having Arnel Pineda participate, not that little clown Schon. Maybe Neal needs to go to Florida and seriously think about looking at property in the Villages, it is about that time.
